Course Description:

In small teams participants will learn how to:

- use a video camera,
- set up lighting,
- compose a shot,
- create a plot around an issue of their choice
- do plasticine animation and
- translate these skills into the production of a powerful and insightful film.

Students are introduced to Final Cut Pro editing software and work with a professional editor during the completion of their film. Youth leave the workshop with confidence in their filmmaking skills; excited about the film they created, and empowered to use media as a tool for creating positive social change. The video shorts made during the course will be hosted on ReelYouth.ca and uploaded to You Tube. They will also be entered into the Reel Youth Film Festival, a youth juried film festival touring Canada and parts of the States in the fall of 2008.

Instructor Bio:

Mark Vonesch is a film maker, a visual artist and the Founder and Director of Reel Youth. He has made over 200 films with young people over the last six years, which have been screened in Film Festivals across North America, broadcast on Television and distributed on-line. He develops film making programs and trains facilitators and teachers around using the media to empower young people to share their stories and speak up about the changes they wish to see in the world. Mark has worked across Canada and parts of the States and just co-produced a film in Mysore, India working with children who live on the street. In October Mark is leading a CIDA funded film project in Nepal. For more information visit www.reelyouth.ca
